

IASC: International Aloe Science Council

What is meant by the International Aloë Science Council?

Aloë vera is known throughout the world and is a popular ingredient in many products. Many manufacturers claim on their labels that their product contains wholesome aloë vera, yet a product needs to contain a certain percentage of aloë vera to be effective. The International Aloë Science Council, IASC, developed a certification programme in the 80s and produced a seal of approval. This programme was created to clarify existing uncertainty about the quality of products and to certify these. It includes among other things, in-site inspection of the facilities of manufacturers and crop growers. Scientific methods are used to determine the presence and percentage of aloë vera accurately. Products which bear the IASC seal are listed on the IASC website. These products have shown to meet the demands and that they contain high-quality aloë vera. It is not without pride that we can say that we were the first to receive this seal of approval and even exceed expectations.
